

Bold Strokes Books Announces New Author Development Forum

WANT TO PUBLISH WITH BOLD STROKES BOOKS?

The BSB New Author Development Forum is a small online mentoring group for unpublished writers of lesbian romance and mystery who are working on a novel they wish to submit to Bold Strokes Books. The Forum is a venue for craft and manuscript development. BSB senior consulting editor Jennifer Knight will guide members toward making their stories publishable during a series of online workshops. Discussion will be both manuscript-specific and topic-focused. BSB publisher, Len Barot, and other guests will also offer their advice and expertise periodically. The Forum is open to:

- Unpublished, un-contracted writers who intend to submit a MS to Bold Strokes in the near future.
- Writers who have already submitted a manuscript to Bold Strokes and plan to re-submit the same story with revisions, or submit a new manuscript.
- Writers who have had a novel(s) accepted for our Eclipse Ebooks line and are now working on a project to submit for one of our other lines.

BSB provides this resource to writers whose work shows potential for our list requirements. Forum discussion is strictly limited to matters of craft. We offer other BSB online forums for general discussion. Membership is limited, for practical reasons, and there is no guarantee of publication, but we will carefully consider all manuscripts developed within the Forum. To enroll, please send your request to Jennifer Knight at: knight.bsb@gmail.com. With it, send a letter introducing yourself and describing your project and to which BSB line you intend to submit your MS. Please include a 1-2 page synopsis and your manuscript in progress. A minimum of 50 pages is necessary.

Our books are available from Bella Distribution, Perseus, Baker & Taylor, Ingram, Bookazine, booksellers worldwide, and on the web at the Bold Strokes Books Online Bookstore.
