In Finding Home, Beers has given her reader two very likeable heroines and one extremely loveable dog. Sarah Buchanan's long term lover has dumped her for a man. Sarah did get custody of their small Australian herding dog, Bentley. Stuck in the doldrums of "what if's," Sarah takes a three month assignment in New Zealand, leaving Bentley in the care of her parents.

Natalie Fox left teaching to work in an Italian coffee shop. Her situation is ideal, as she rents the apartment above the shop, adores her "mom and pop" bosses, and lives in a world smelling of cinnamon and vanilla. Dumping the trash one evening, she finds a lost, frightened, hungry dog. After feeding and bathing him, Natalie adopts him as her own.

Beers does a wonderful job telling the story of how Sarah and Natalie work out a joint custody arrangement for Bentley. As they spend time together, the sharp business woman and the shop keeper discover they have far more in common than simply their love of Bentley.

Finding Home is the story of exploring possibilities, taking risks, and moving beyond snap judgements. It's a story filled with warmth, humor, and hope. It's a great read that combines nicely with a warm cannoli, fresh from the oven.
